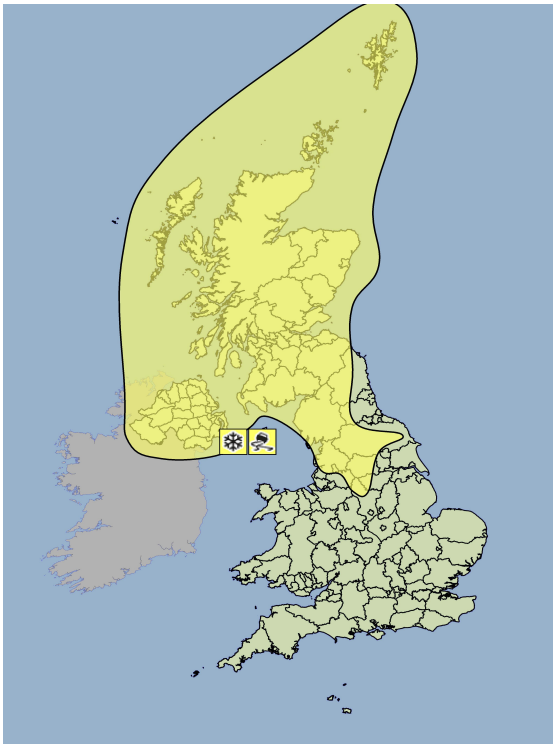
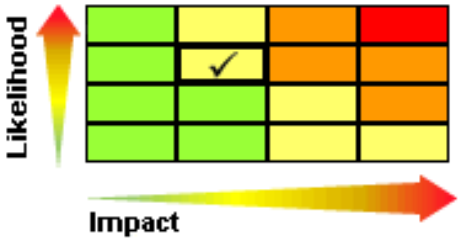
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deep area of low pressure is expected to move slowly eastwards passing close to northern Scotland on Monday night to end up close to the Northern Isles during Tuesday. A strong, unstable and cold westerly flow on its southern flank for much of Monday, will gradually veer northwesterly by Tuesday. Wintry showers will affect many areas, though the risk of disruption becomes confined to higher ground by Monday afternoon.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 11:05 on Mon, 23rd Feb 2015 until 13:00 on Mon, 23rd Feb 2015

Sleet, snow and hail showers will continue to affect northern parts of the UK during Monday. Some slight and temporary accumulations are still possible at low levels during the afternoon and overnight, but by the afternoon the risk of more significant snow accumulations becomes confined to high ground.

This updates the warning issued on Sunday to bring its expiry time forward into Monday afternoon. Until then, the public should be aware of the risk of disruption to travel and for hazardous driving conditions at times.
